

Spring symphony

spring

Spring is a season full of sound. Find a quiet spot, be still and listen for a while. You may hear woodpeckers drumming as they make their nesting hollows, birds singing, cuckoos calling, bees buzzing, rustles from birds or squirrels in the undergrowth, the breeze in the tree tops or if you're unlucky, the sound of falling rain!

Look around you on the woodland floor – what could you use to make those sounds? Find a way to make as many spring sounds as you can.

Then decide which order you want to play them – if you're with a friend, you could play different sounds at the same time.

Now you're ready to perform your spring symphony to the woodland. Maybe a bird or two will come and join in!
